

Tell us a little about yourself, including some personal information (ex. family, achievements, cultural background), future goals and aspirations:

I am a first generation Ecuadorian-American and I am the first woman in my family to attend college. Family is important to me because of the support that I receive from my parents and the words of encouragement give me the power to continue striving for the future. An interesting fact about me is that I have been on the radio in Ecuador before and I love my Ecuadorian culture. In the future, I want to be a Web-Developer or work in Technology. I have a passion in creating websites because I love being creative and learning more when coding. Adding on, I want to be rich when I am older. This unrealistic goal helps me aim for greatness because when I am rich I want to help people who are underprivileged and create change to communities that need it. One day, I wish to fund a school and help students find their passions and know that they are able to accomplish anything and everything. I aspire to help others and be part of a community that guides others and provides a supporting hand.

Please share your hobbies, interests and if you are part of any other clubs/organizations:

I enjoy reading in my free time, coding websites, and biking. I am interested in being part of a club where I am not just a member.
